The traveller's well

You're very welcome, traveller. Take a moment. Here you see me, almost dry, but a fertile well I was. And a lot of thirst I quenched.

I'm not asking you to listen to my story. I'm asking you for something simpler. Drink up my story. You'll see it's worth it. Everything is worthwhile when you are thirsty.

Traveller, come on, drink some of my story. And take me with you.

I am a well, I was a well, but whoever drinks me takes some of me with them, so I can say that I have travelled all over the world. I've been to Avis, I know Cano like the back of my hand, I've even been to Alfamude! Look how much I've travelled and seen and lived.

To go with you just say three times, 'I have drunk this water, I have listened to this well.'

And now I've told you about me, it's time you told me about your life. Why did you come here? How did you get to me? Do you like this pyramid that's on me now? I like it and do you want to know why? The pyramid is a symbol of mystery. And you too are mystery, water, adventure.

Well, tell me. What mystery, water and adventure are you, my travelling friend?
